The Center for Migration, Demography and Population Studies (CMDP) was approved at the September 2016 Board of Regents’ meeting.

The center will conduct interdisciplinary research on international, domestic and regional migration flows, population changes, and subsequent demographic shifts and the impact of these factors on the environment as measured by traditional environmental concepts, as well as broader constructs that include public health, education, the economy, the legal system and politics. The interdisciplinary composition and orientation of the center is what distinguishes it from similarly focused centers, and is why the broader impacts, mission and goals of the center cannot be achieved outside of this multidisciplinary framework.

Effective: September 9, 2016

This is the final approval.
