Subject: Graduate Certificate in Social Science Methods

The Graduate College has approved the new Graduate Certificate in Social Science Methods effective July 1, 2016.

The certificate program will be open to current graduate students (admitted into a UNLV graduate program) who will require the use of social science methods in the original research produced as part of their degree program. This certificate program addresses the increasingly interdisciplinary nature of social science research. As UNLV students begin to pursue research questions that cross the boundaries of traditional academic silos, the methods training offered within those silos is inadequate to the task of preparing students for the realities of research and this certificate will address that issue.

Effective: July 1, 2016

This is the final approval.
